g. Summary of DoD information system or electronic collection. Answers to these questions should be consistent with security guidelines for release of information to the public.

(1) Describe the purpose of this DoD information system or electronic collection and briefly describe the types of personal information about individuals collected in the system.

The COPS is a centralized database that contains five subsystems that support the Army Military Police Corps. These subsystems provide (1) law enforcement reporting via the Military Police Reporting System (MPRS); (2) correctional tracking via the Army Correctional Information System (ACIS); (3) vehicle and weapons registration via the Vehicle Registration System (VRS); (4) enemy prisoner of war and detainee accountability via the Detainee Reporting System (DRS); and (5) parole and clemency management of inmates in Army correctional institutions which is the Army Review Board Agency (ARBA).

The system contains data derived from military police reports and or similar reports containing investigation of criminal complaints and incidents in which there is an Army interest, along with details of any criminal prosecution, civil court action, or non-judicial administrative punishment. The system also records the registration of vehicles and weapons. In addition, the system contains details from correctional treatment records which are used to determine prisoners' custody classifications, work assignments, educational needs, adjustment to confinement, areas of particular concern, and, as the basis for clemency, parole and restoration to duty considerations. Automated records provide pertinent information required for proper management of confinement facility population, demographic studies, status of discipline and responsiveness of personnel procedures, as well as confinement utilization factors such as population turnover, recidivism, etc. The system contains information on agency personnel as well as members of the public, family members, victims and witnesses of crimes. The system assists the Army in maintaining discipline, law and order, and aids law enforcement and criminal intelligence personnel in executing the law. The system provides management data on which to base crime prevention, selective enforcement, and improved driving safety. The system also provides statistical data for the purposes of developing crime trends by major categories (e.g., crimes against persons, drug crimes, crimes against property, fraud crimes and other offenses); developing law enforcement and crime prevention programs to reduce or deter crime within Army communities; to satisfy statutory reporting requirements; and in support of Army safety programs.

The COPS is an existing system in Operations and Maintenance (O&M) life-cycle management and is owned by Office of the Provost Marshal General. The system presently has no boundaries and interconnections with any other systems.
